A PLEA FOR GOOD PIE
IT IS A WHOLESOME FOOD IF IT IS PROPERLY MADE.

The Crust Should Be of Water-Like Thickness and Crisp and Flaky. Five Rules to Be Observed in the Making of a Perfect Pie.

Although food theorists and food cranks have varying opinions as to the wholesomeness of certain foods, they one and all agree in denouncing pie. It is the one dish most ardently condemned, and yet the one dish most universally liked at least by Americans. Still, notwithstanding the bad reputation pie enjoys, it is a wholesome dish if properly made.

In making it the average housewife rolls out a heavy, sodden crust, and then spreads it in a thick layer over the bottom and sides of a pie plate. She forgets to rub this crust with the white of egg and immediately puts in the filling of custard, fruit or mince meat, whose juices will later soak into the crust, making it still more sodden. She then covers the pie, perhaps, with another layer of this thick pastry and puts it in an oven that is not hot enough. The oven should be so hot that the pastry will brown before the butter in it has barely a chance to melt. The crust will then be crisp. Another reason why pies are so universally disapproved is that they are nearly always made with lard, or half lard and half butter. Lard should never be used in a pie or, in fact, in any dish. An eminent physiologist in a leading university says that "lard is the bane of American cookery and is fit for no stomach except a pig's." A tiny bit of lard in a batch of bread may be excusable, but even then butter is better.

All pie crust, of course, should be of water-like thickness. Not only are properly made crusts harmless, but some popular fillings are exceedingly wholesome. What, for instance, could be better than a custard or a pumpkin filling? The latter is, as a rule, only a custard rich in eggs, with an addition of pumpkin and a few spices, which are aids to digestion.

Without doubt all pies should be eaten in moderate portions, especially by delicate persons, but this rule applies to any dish. Even cream is not good for persons under certain conditions, yet no one but a crank would deny it to a person in good health. Many food faddists expect healthy people to live daily on an invalid's diet.

There are five rules to observe in the making of a perfect pie. First, rub the undercrust with the white of an egg before putting in the filling to prevent it from soaking into the pastry; second, bake it in the hottest of ovens; third, place it in the lower half of the oven at first against the bottom, later removing it to the upper shelf; fourth, always place crust in the refrigerator to become thoroughly chilled and hard before filling and baking it; fifth, pound the pastry well until it is filled with air spaces.

Volumes could be written on the correct treatment of pastry. Any of the recipes in standard cookbooks will do, however, if a few details are carried out.

A marble board is an ideal arrangement for rolling pastry. A current household magazine suggests that the hideous marble tops of old fashioned tables might be fitted up for this purpose.

Smooth, even pie crust is an abomination, and yet many housekeepers think that is the proper way to have it, and sometimes they will even be heard to complain when by accident their pie crust is rough and almost breaking into wafer-like flakes. This flakiness is, however, the proper condition of pastry.

Pies as a rule are better adapted to a winter than a summer diet, because of the butter, which makes them too rich for warm weather fare. Fruit pies, however, are good at all seasons, and there are few things more attractive than huckleberry and other fruit pies even in the hottest dog days. There are also many good cold meat pies which are welcome at picnics. When preparing a chicken or meat pie it is always better to add a little baking powder to the regular rule for ordinary pie crust.

Add one cup of butter to every two cups of flour (pastry flour). Then chop together in a wooden bowl, with an ordinary old fashioned chopping knife, until the mixture is broken into small bits the size of peas. Add half a cup of ice water. Mix with a knife, then beat and turn and beat and turn until the whole is smooth, but full of lightness. This pounding and turning is better if done upon a marble board. Never touch the pastry with a spoon or the hand, but with a knife; then put it where it will become ice cold and hard before rolling it out.

There are several variations to this rule which can do no harm. If baking powder is wanted, add a teaspoonful to this amount of flour and butter.—New York Tribune.
